Internally, SW has sponsored online classes at Stanford and Duke Universities for employees to educate themselves on sustainability practices. Employees then apply their knowledge to create robust multi-channel social media campaigns to further educate new audiences to SW's efforts - understanding SW's sustainability practices and new technologies in regard to industry standards. As the company's culture evolves internally and externally, they have continued to reinforce their sustainable label. The company is certified as a California Green Business, successfully meeting all 65 criteria demonstrating that SW operates in an environmentally responsible manner.
