“Yes, the home rental market in Texas is hot right now, but the wrong assessment of property management costs can cost investors in the long run. Suppose an investor chooses to charge too little for rent and anticipates too little in maintenance costs? In that case, it could put them in the red,” explained Jason Marascio, North Texas Property Management CEO. “My property management team understands the local real estate market.”

Texas residential property investors can review the update page for rental property management at <https://www.ntxpm.com/free-rental-property-evaluation/>. North Texas Property management can help provide a no-obligation, no-cost rental property assessment for single family rentals in Frisco, Garland, Carrollton, and surrounding areas. The property management service provides property management support for single-family rental homes in the North Texas suburbs. Persons searching for management support in particular cities can review the city-specific pages, such as the one for Frisco, Texas, at <https://www.ntxpm.com/frisco/>, while interested persons who want to learn more about property management can visit <https://www.trec.texas.gov/taxonomy/faq-category/property-management>.

INVESTORS GET THE SCOOP ON RENTAL PROPERTY MANAGEMENT IN FRISCO, GARLAND, AND CARROLLTON, TEXAS

Here is the background on this release. The so-called "hot" home rental market in the North Texas suburbs could entice investors to dive in and purchase several properties in cities such as Garland, Carrollton, and Frisco. An investor may understand the market but not realize the work and expense of rental property management. It could require a local expert to help set a reasonable rental price and project the long-term maintenance costs. A professional team of property managers based in Plano, Texas, can give property investors a fair assessment of any single-family home in the North Dallas Suburbs. A professional assessment around investments and projected returns of a single-family home rental could help set an investor up for long-term success.
