Explore Medical Cannabis vs. Recreational/Adult Use Dispensary Cannabis Experiences

Margit E. Whitlock, AIA, LEED AP, Principal and Creative Director of Architectural Concepts, Inc. a San Diego firm regarded as one of the Southwest’s top boutique architectural and interior design firms, and Dr. Leah Johnson, Medical Cannabis Pharmacist, visit the challenges of Medical Cannabis vs. Recreational/Adult Use Dispensary Experiences in a three-part video podcast entitled Designing for Health and Wellness.

The three-episode video podcast delves into the differences and similarities between cannabis patients and cannabis recreational consumers. The first episode focuses on the medical cannabis journey; the second deals with dispensary experiences and the third discusses the ideal dispensary experience of the future.

Since opening its doors in 1992, ACI has focused on hospitality, restaurant, and commercial markets. Located in San Diego, the boutique firm provides Architectural Design, Site and Building Planning and Interior Design services for a variety of project types.

Dr. Leah Johnson, of Alchemist Cannabis Consulting, is a Doctor of Pharmacy and a Medical Cannabis Educator and Speaker. She lends her educational and clinical expertise to the discussion of how design can benefit health wellness, particularly in cannabis sector.

During the past quarter century, Architectural Concepts Inc. has developed a reputation for its professionalism, creativity, and vision. With projects ranging from timeshare resorts to renowned spas, cannabis dispensaries, intimate lounges and branded hotels, Architectural Concepts Inc. has received numerous awards for its creative solutions in hospitality oriented architectural and interior design.

“Our firm excels in design,” says Margit. “But as importantly, we enjoy working on projects that take client’s concepts and budgets into account to create beautiful, workable environments in a timely fashion. We have a deep connection and understanding of the medical benefits of cannabis and are proud to offer our views and suggestions in our video podcast.”
