Xavier Mitchell, Valiant Eagle CEO says, "Although we value all users of Fungy, our pioneers will have a very special place in our lives. They are those who believed in us first. Every startup needs those champions to help grow and that is the role our pioneers will play and be compensated accordingly via perks."

It was important to everyone on the team that we provide inherent safeguards to protect our users from infringement and to also find ways that creators could reap immediate and long term profits”

Early registration will begin on Monday June 27th. Our goal is to have over 100,000 users prior to our launch date which will be released shortly via a separate press release.

With the climate of NFTs shifting, Fungy differentiates itself by offering NFTs of specific IPs. The company has a full gamut of entertainment offerings and has also begun an initiative to integrate Real Estate on its site. Thanks to in-house ownership of 40+ international TV channels, exclusive deals with film companies such as Cinevision and Providence Film Group, and access to sports groups including the American Basketball Association and ABA Canada, Fungy members can trade NFTs originating from an ever-expanding library of 2,000+ films, television shows and exclusive content.

Fungy provides a world of IRL (In Real Life) utility, empowering members to claim sports games, cinema and concert tickets, gain VIP film premier access, grab exclusive merchandise, visit film and TV production sets and, in some instances, even appear in productions themselves.

The company has recently acquired a redundant computing cluster environment, which will be hosted at its West Coast location. The new server will be an addition to the clustering methodology for providing a fail-over, load balancing, for parallelizable tasks to be distributed from server to server which is perfect for cross-region backup.

Both servers are equipped with Intel Xeon processors, which are widely used in top-tier data centers performing heavy computations for cloud computing data centers, industrial manufacturing and data analytics applications.

The core software is Open Source Linux, providing an array of built-in security defenses including firewalls that can be tailored to our requirements. Governmental Critical Infrastructure and National Security Systems incorporate Open Source Linux which provides added confirmation of its reliability.

Flexible clustering and adaptive mass storage are pivotal concepts that are utilized. Such systems can function both as routine components of conventional computer environments as well as key elements in facilitating emergency situations, system repairs and a need for increases in memory, storage or data analysis. This falls in line with Fungy's commitment to protection and also making sure the marketplace continues to function seamlessly.

Mitchell goes on to say, "This has been an endeavor similar to running up a hill with lots of obstacles thrown at us. Nevertheless, we persisted and are now ready to launch. It was important to everyone on the team that we provide inherent safeguards to protect our users from infringement and to also find ways that creators could reap immediate and long term profits."
