ORTEC USA was asked to showcase its company culture by submitting a portfolio that exemplified six key elements that make it an Inspiring Workplace. These elements were related to purpose, leadership, wellbeing, inclusion, communication, and experience. The top 50 companies that excelled in all six elements were recognized for their achievements on June 22 at the Inspire Work Summit in

New York City. Placing 3rd in the Medium Business category and 6th overall in the nation, ORTEC USA was judged by some of the top thought leaders and experts in the field of employee experience, HR, employee wellbeing, future of work, and diversity, equity, and inclusion.

“ORTEC employees are extremely dedicated – and that dedication shows through their time, their effort and ultimately, the quality solutions we develop,” said Jeff Bailey, CEO, ORTEC Americas. “Our goal is to help employees feel comfortable, included, and engaged.”

“We met the extraordinary challenges of the past few years by developing programs, activities, and communications programs that not only helped them connect with their teams and their jobs, but also ensured they felt included and supported by their peers and managers,” said Herman Wierenga, COO, ORTEC Americas, who attended the award ceremony. “Being named an Inspiring Workplace validates our efforts, and we are honored to be named the 6th Inspiring

Workplace in the Nation.”
