"Conversation," was written by Gianna Branca, produced by Nick Stone and Thomas Barsoe for OC Hit. It was mixed/mastered by Daniel Martz. The audio will be complemented by a live in studio performance video that was filmed at MorningStar Studios in suburban Philadelphia and will premiere today on Gianna's official YouTube Channel.

Similar to the likes of Olivia Rodrigo, Julia Michaels and Taylor Swift, Branca writes from the heart and tells a story with her lyrics. "Conversation" itself describes first love, and the longing for closure that comes with heartbreak. The lyrics paint a picture of two exes at a table for two, making small talk and avoiding the things they really want to ask each other. The song will surely connect with anyone who has experienced young love and understands the feeling of secretly hoping to see an ex just one last time. At the end, Branca ultimately discovers a bittersweet truth: those who were once everything to us can become just "a passing breeze." People enter and leave our lives for many reasons over time, and it can be hard to let them go when things are left unsaid. This enigma is exactly why Branca wrote "conversation."

"When I was 14, I was going through a hard time, and an adult told me to try journaling. I tried, I really did, but I just couldn't seem to find the right words for what I was feeling. I knew I loved music though. So, one day, I sat down at my piano in my living room and I tried writing my feelings over some chords...and I've been doing it ever since. I think of all my songs as journal entries, and I always try to make them personal and specific. I think there is something so cool about a song's ability to let a stranger into your heart or into a specific moment in your life.

My debut single, "conversation" is (hopefully) one of those songs." - Gianna Branca
