These soccer camps in Morocco are part of the “Moroccan Voices” initiative and they are rooted in U.S.-based sports diplomacy programs. This project, “Moroccan Voices,” is designed to help some of the most challenged and underprivileged youth soccer players in Morocco. The objective is for the Global Foundation to help deliver a high-level, professionally oriented soccer camp that is free of charge to the youth participants. In turn, the youth participants will learn valuable soccer skills, along with peace-building mechanisms to avoid violence and boost self-esteem.

The Chairman and Executive Director of the Global Foundation for Peace through Soccer, Antonio Soave, said, “This is one of the greatest opportunities to spread peace among people in the modern era. Soccer is a wonderful peace-building mechanism, and the people of Morocco have welcomed us wholeheartedly, enthusiastically, and with open arms. We look forward to assisting to grow both soccer and peace in Morocco. Ultimately, we plan to replicate this program in many other areas of the world.”
