We also meet "Mama J" Janice, an everyday woman who is struggling to make ends me for herself and her children. Day after day, night after night, her life revolves around her identity as a mother and seldom as a woman. Then one day she meets Boots. Mama J discovers what it means to be Janice again, and Boots is desperately seeking to pay for his former sins. Readers will be left with the question: Is the price of atonement too high? One thing is for sure, they will meet a darker breed of bikers in bestselling author ML Nystrom's gritty The Dutchmen MC series.

"The last time his life got messed up, he responded by growing hard and bitter. A different version of himself that had mired itself so deep in the darkness, he was surprised to find he had a way out. Very few knew his real story, and he preferred it that way. Now he had a chance to pay for the sins of his past. It was time for him to atone and climb out of the abyss he'd lived in for so long." - from "The Price of Atonement"
