Dr. Rod J. Rohrich

"Rhinoplasty is a surgery of great finesse," explains Dr. Rohrich. "The difference between a poor outcome and an outstanding outcome can be down to a millimeter of difference, and the true, final results of surgery are usually not seen until months later."

In his course, Dr. Rohrich presents techniques and methodologies that he has developed over his extensive career that surgeons can utilize to help achieve consistent results and positive outcomes.

"Rhinoplasty is in a class of its own within plastic surgery," says Dr. Rohrich, who sees a relatively large number of rhinoplasty and especially revision rhinoplasty cases. "Not only are you responsible for the surgical planning and performance of the rhinoplasty or revision, but also have to be keenly aware and sensitive to how every patient's unique situation and circumstances may affect that person's self-esteem, identity, and long term quality of life."

Rhinoplasty truly epitomizes plastic surgery as a whole because it is a surgery of such great finesse and takes years to master."
