According to the American College of Prosthodontics (ACP), in 2019, a total of 178 million Americans were reported to be missing at least one tooth. Additionally, according to the same study, in 2019, nearly 40 million Americans reported missing teeth. Furthermore, in February 2021, the National Oral Health Program Division of the Ministry of Health and Family Welfare launched the National Oral Health Policy on the MoHFW website for prevention of dental diseases and promotion of oral health in India.

The growth of the global dental burns and endodontic market is largely driven by the growth of the geriatric population; Increasing incidence of dental diseases such as gum disease, dental cracks, periodontal disease and dental cavities; Increased demand for root canal treatments; And increasing investment in R&D initiatives by various healthcare companies.

According to Allied Market Research report title, the Dental Burs and Endodontic Market was valued at $1,283.6 million in 2020, and is estimated to reach $2,125.95 million by 2028. Dental burs are defined as major instruments used in modern dentistry for tooth restoration procedures and surgical care. They are widely available in various shapes and sizes, depending on the various dental procedures, functionality of the burs and clinical preferences.

Increased demand for root canal procedures, increased awareness of oral hygiene to prevent the risk of dental diseases, and initiatives taken by the government for the development and production of various dental instruments drive the growth of dental burs and endodontic market. However, side effects associated with dental burs and endodontic products such as mouth swelling and tooth brittleness are expected to restrain the market growth during the forecast period.
