Blood from the patient's body is circulated through an external equipment or device for removal of toxin, endotoxin, or impurities and is returned to the patient's body with the help of blood collection tubing. This process is termed as blood purification. Nowadays, blood purification technique is widely used for treating several disorders that are refractory to traditional therapies, such as surgeries and drug administration. Blood purification works by eliminating pathogenic agents and toxins from blood using numerous other bio-separation procedures such as filtration, dialysis or adsorption. Owing to these advantages over conventional methods, blood purification is majorly preferred in various autoimmune and metabolic disorder treatments.

Presently, the most known application of blood purification technique is hemodialysis treatment. Large patient population suffering from kidney failure is stimulating the demand for development of sophisticated equipment and devices for blood purification in these hemodialysis patients. As a result of which, pharmaceutical players in the market are investing in R&D of these equipment, thereby, driving the growth of the market.
