Both have a breadth and depth of expertise in chiropractic and are dedicated to the ICA mission to promote and protect chiropractic worldwide. I look forward to working alongside them in the coming years to raise awareness of the ICA, expand our membership, and advocate for chiropractic around the world."

The International Chiropractors Association (ICA) is the oldest continuously active international chiropractic organization in the world. Founded in 1926 by Dr. B.J. Palmer, the ICA represents the chiropractic community, and supports and advances the interests of chiropractic, chiropractors, and the patients they serve through advocacy, research, and education. Throughout its long history, the ICA has continued to educate and inform the public, other health care professions, and health policy makers on the principles and definitions of chiropractic to foster clarity for a broader understanding and acceptance of the profession as a distinct healing philosophy, science, and art.
