NEW YORK CITY, NEW YORK, UNITED STATES, July 20, 2022
/EINPresswire.com/ -- Contactless Payment Market Is Set to Grow Rapidly.....

According to a new report, the Global contactless payment market is set to grow rapidly in the next few years. This is newsworthy because it represents a major shift in the way consumers will make payments. The report, from Juniper Research, predicts that the total value of contactless payments will reach $1.5 trillion by 2024, up from $600 billion in 2019. This growth will be driven by the increasing adoption of contactless payments by both consumers and merchants.

There are several reasons for this rapid growth. First, contactless payments are more convenient than traditional methods like cash and checks. Second, they are more secure, as they reduce the risk of fraud and theft. Finally, they offer greater transparency and accountability, as all transactions are recorded electronically. This growth is good news for both consumers and businesses. For consumers, it means more convenience and security when making payments.
