The calcium peroxide market consists of sales of calcium peroxide by entities (organizations, sole traders, and partnerships) that refer to an inorganic compound with the formula  $\text{CaO}_2$ . Calcium peroxide is an industrial chemical formed when calcium salts and hydrogen peroxide are combined. Calcium peroxide is almost insoluble in water, but when it comes into touch with it, it hydrolyses and releases oxygen. When calcium peroxide is exposed to acid, it decomposes into hydrogen peroxide. It has superior oxidizing agent properties, making it suited for usage in agricultural sectors to maintain soil quality and produce productivity.

Global Calcium Peroxide Market Trends

According to the calcium peroxide industry analysis, the rising demand for food is expected to propel the growth of the calcium peroxide market. The major factors for increasing demand for food are population growth and the rising incomes of individuals. Calcium peroxide is commonly utilized as a dough conditioner in the baking business. It has a variety of uses, the most common of which is in the production of bread. For instance, according to agricultural economic insight, a US-based provider of key agricultural economy trends, there is an increase in demand for bread in the US in 2021. The fresh bread and rolls category grew 6.1% to $15.0 billion in sales in 2021—the strongest sales growth in any essential food category. Thus, the increase in demand for food will support the calcium peroxide market.
