"I have always been fascinated by the idea of making money online. The tricky part came when I was figuring out what I wanted Young Trillionaire to be. With so many opportunities, the question came down to 'what to do?'," said Kainth.

Now looking back from the other side, Kainth is offering valuable advice for people who are in those same shoes.

"Firstly, it's crucial to identify a content niche. Ideally, this will be an area you are truly interested in to ensure you remain dedicated. Next, create a memorable brand name that will stand out to your audience.

"Finally, posting consistently in the long term will help things fall into place. The sweet spot is three or four times every day. I know that's a lot and can be daunting for people who aren't experienced content creators. However, there are plenty of avenues available for support, such as freelancing platforms like Fiverr and Upwork." advised Kainth.
