

California Post-Covid Restraining Orders

What You Need To Know and How A Paralegal Can Help

IRVINE, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, July 28, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- A restraining order (also called a "protection order") is a court order that can protect someone from physical or sexual abuse, threats, stalking, or harassment. The person receiving the injunction is referred to as the "protected person". The person against whom the restraining order is directed is the "Detained Person". Sometimes injunctions include other "protected persons" such as family or household members of the protected person.

In California, restraining orders are typically issued as Personal conduct orders, Stay-away orders, and Residence exclusion ("kick-out" or "move-out") orders

Personal conduct orders are used to stop acts against everyone named in the restraining order as a "protected person." This includes actions such as:

- Contacting, calling, sending messages (even emails)
- Attacking, striking, battering
- Stalking
- Threatening
- Sexual assault
- Harassing
- Destruction of property

Stay-away orders are used to keep people a certain distance away from:

- The protected person(s)
- Where the person lives
- Place of work
- A child's school or childcare
- Vehicles
- Other necessary places

Residence exclusion ("Kick-out" or "move-out" orders

These are orders requiring a person to move out from where the protected person lives and take only clothing and personal belongings until the court hearing. These types of orders are usually asked for during domestic violence, elder, or dependent adult abuse.
