The sample preparation market consists of sales of sample preparation products and related services by entities (organizations, sole traders, and partnerships) that are engaged in providing sample preparation instruments, consumables, and kits. Sample preparation products refer to a set of solid/liquid handling procedures for extracting or enriching solutes from sample matrices and incorporating them into the final analyte solution. Sample preparation is a technique that is used for converting biological and chemical products into a form that can be placed directly in analytical instruments for analysis.
