/EINPresswire.com/ -- As coronavirus cases continue to ebb and flow, and with the Taiwan Centers for Disease Control predicting the country could face another wave of the virus next month, Scientology Volunteer Ministers are holding seminars on their "How to Stay Well" initiative.

They bring ample copies of their "How to Keep Yourself and Others Well" booklets containing simple explanations of the best practices for preventing the spread of illness. And they play a series of public service announcements that illustrate these prevention principles. The booklets and activities are based on the concept that an ounce of prevention is worth a ton of cure.

Last week, the Volunteer Ministers set up their tent at the Guanyin Mountain Dajue Temple. The district chief, who has also participated in the drug prevention campaign the Church of Scientology supports, welcomed the volunteers. "In the two years since I took office, I have been doing epidemic prevention constantly," he said, "so today's activities are very relevant."
