changed when at the age of thirty-three, his doctor ordered him to quit working at his high-level bank position, where he was an advisor to CEOs of startups, major tech companies, and high net worth individuals. The stress was literally killing him, leaving André on the brink of cardiac arrest.

André then discovered the knowledge of real estate investing, and was able to achieve financial independence in less than seven months in that industry. Today, André is the founder and CEO of Residual Roads Business Institute and InvestFar, the latter being the first mobile app that lets users purchase, renovate, sell, or manage an investment property remotely.

Residing in Los Angeles, California, his mission now is to help others from all walks of life discover mental awareness and financial independence.
