Many often think of tree services as a way to spruce up their lawns. While tree trimming and pruning help with a lawn's overall aesthetics, this is not its only purpose. Tree trimming and pruning are a way to remove branches and limbs to protect the structural integrity of a tree.

Trees fall over onto homes or properties because they aren't properly trimmed and pruned. This makes them ripe for strong winds, rains, ice, and snow to make them collapse. Regular trimming and pruning will protect the homeowner's property from unexpected damages.

Another problem that can compromise a homeowner's property is unhealthy trees. Unhealthy trees may not collapse from bad weather. Instead, they will fall seemingly out of nowhere. In reality, they fall because fungus or wood-destroying insects have compromised their structure. They may also fall because the tree is dead.

Attleboro Tree Removal Services encourages homeowners and business owners to get regular tree inspections at least every three years. If the area has recently experienced bad weather, then homeowners and businesses should get them inspected even if it hasn't been three years. Regular inspections will prevent a tree from falling on the property, causing damages and injury. This is especially important in a commercial setting where expensive lawsuits can result from negligence from the business owner.

If a tree on a property is in bad shape, tree removal in Attleboro, MA, is usually the best option. However, it is not the only option. In instances where the tree is salvageable, Attleboro Tree Removal Services usually recommends their cabling and bracing services. When a tree isn't pruned and trimmed when it is young, it may develop a V-shape within its structure.

As this tree ages, this structure can weaken the tree, subject to snapping in two, resulting in partial or total collapse. To protect the upper canopy from further stress, cabling the upper limbs will help stabilize it. Likewise, if the trunk of a tree is not stable and leans, it can also collapse during bad weather. Bracing the tree trunk will keep it anchored and provide the extra support it needs.

Another vital part of tree care is stump removal. Some homeowners may inherit homes that have tree stumps. Or they may have a tree cut down but decide not to remove the stump. Keeping stumps on the property can be hazardous for various reasons. It is not a good idea to keep stumps because they can create a trip hazard for guests.

Another reason is that they can develop fungus and attract wood-destroying insects. If there are small children or pets on the property, the fungus could be consumed by them, resulting in sickness.

Wood-destroying insects will consume the stump and look to the wood in homes or businesses once they're finished with the stump. This could lead to enormous, costly damage from termites, carpenter ants, and wood boring beetles. Even mice are attracted to stumps and could start an infestation within a home or business.

Trees and shrubery need as much TLC as trees because they can attract pests and develop diseases. Shrubs may also obstruct homeowners' view as they exit, resulting in a collision with another car or a pedestrian. Getting proper tree trimming and pruning can keep the trees and shrubs healthy and minimize hazards.

One more critical service that Attleboro Tree Removal Services offers is land clearing. This is a popular option for commercial customers that want to use the land for development or agriculture. But this service is also available for residential customers that want to clear land for swimming pools or recreational activities.
