Property investors could have a portfolio of homes in various Texas neighborhoods or other states.”

Jason Marascio

“Property investors could have a portfolio of homes in various Texas neighborhoods or other states. Physically managing all those rental homes in different towns may not be possible. An investor could use help from a local expert,” explained Jason Marascio, North Texas Property Management CEO. “We just added fresh content to our management-focused page to assist property investors who need quick answers to questions about single-family, residential property management services.”

Investors of the single-family home market in the North Dallas Suburbs can review the new content at <https://www.ntxpm.com/residential-property-management/>. NTXPM is a team of dependable property managers who support the management of residential properties such as single-family homes, duplexes, condos and townhouses. The local experts can help market rentals, manage tenant screenings and support the on-boarding process for viable renters. Monthly support can include rent collection, recording property maintenance expenses, and providing a clean end-of-year accounting for tax purposes. Residential property owners can review the blog post page at <https://www.ntxpm.com/tag/residential-property-managment/>. Investors who own a residential property in Plano, Allen, or Richardson can reach out to the local property management team for a no-obligation consultation.
