Brief Overview on Market:

Cleanroom is defined as a room where concentration of air borne particulate matter, including hair, fungus, dust and bacteria is controlled. This type of room is constructed to decline the generation, retention and introduction of particles inside the room. The process is done by maintaining suitable pressure, temperature and humidity conditions.

Furthermore, increase in demand to maintain an antimicrobial environment by declining the level of airborne particulates in these facilities extend profitable opportunities to the market players in the forecast period of 2022 to 2029.
