Overview Of The Cable Modem Market

The cable modem market consists of sales of cable modems by entities (organizations, sole proprietorships, and partnerships) that provide high internet access by transmitting and receiving data through digital packets. A cable modem is a network link that provides bi-directional data transmission to a hybrid fiber-coaxial, radiofrequency through the glass, and coaxial cable infrastructure using radio frequency channels. A cable modem makes use of coax cable, the identical infrastructure that brings tv programming to enterprises or homes.
