Some Key Highlights from the Report:

Based on service type, the regulatory writing & publishing segment accounted for the highest revenue share of around 40% in 2020. Increasing need for high-quality, comprehensive and convincing regulatory filing documents and rising demand for regulatory writing & publishing services among healthcare companies including medical device and biopharmaceutical companies are key factors supporting the growth of this segment.

The clinical stage segment held the largest revenue share in 2020 and is expected to register the highest revenue CAGR over the forecast period. Growing number of clinical trial registrations and increasing development of biologics and personalized orphan drugs the major factors expected to fuel this segment's growth.

Based on end-use, the pharmaceutical companies segment is projected to register the highest CAGR during the forecast period. Factors majorly contributing to this segment's growth are growing need for development of advanced pharmaceutical products, increasing number of clinical trials, and surging need for regulatory affairs outsourcing services.

Among regional markets, the North America market was the most dominant in terms of revenue share contribution in 2020. Increasing life sciences research & development programs, rise in drug discovery & development activities, growing number of clinical trials, and presence of leading pharmaceutical and biotechnology companies in the region are the most important factors accounting for the North America market growth.
