An informed job hunter is the best job seeker because they are more confident in dealing with employers conducting background checks and have less fear about the process.”

W. Barry Nixon

The blog contains three sections:

- Advice for Employers,
- Advice for Background Check Firms and
- Advice for Job Seekers.

These three focus areas encompass the main components of the background checking industry's supply chain, and each will benefit from the expert information and answers contained in the Employment Screening Advice Center.

W. Barry Nixon, COO, PreemploymentDirectory.com, a widely recognized expert on background screening, will be contributing posts. Mr. Nixon is the co-author of Background Screening Investigations: Managing Hiring Risk from an HR and Security Perspective, founder of PreemploymentDirectory.com, and a past recipient of the coveted 'Most Influential People in Security' award by Security Magazine.

According to Nixon, "Background checks have grown to the point where more than 95% of United States employers use them as part of the hiring process. Along with this high usage, background checks have also become a very litigious area with violations of federal FCRA and state consumer reporting laws continuing to increase.

- The 'Advice Center for Employers provides expert content and information to help employers stem the tide of increasing lawsuits.
- The 'Advice Center for Background Check Firms' provides insightful information to help CRAs to continuously improve their business, and
- The 'Advice Center for Job Seekers' educates people about the background checking process because we firmly believe that "An informed job hunter is the best job seeker because they are more confident in dealing with employers conducting background checks and have less fear about the process. It is also likely that a lot of the tension that oftentimes exists between job seekers and background screening firms that labels the background checking firms the 'bad guys' that are preventing people from getting jobs will be reduced as job seekers gain more understanding about the background check process and become more comfortable with it."
