Water Damage Advice

"We often get a lot of the same questions from Cincinnati and Dayton residents that just need some guidance or recommendations on what they are facing. I think this portal for damage restoration advice can provide some of that." explained Jason Clarke, CEO of the company. "Homeowners and businesses can use the information and decide if they will need immediate help now or possibly in the future."

Ken Cash

Some of the article include facts about fire damage or water damage or mold removal advice. There is also information about how homeowners insurance works when it comes to unexpected disasters.

The blog continuously adds article across the categories of water, fire and mold damage and has gained considerable traffic since it began earlier this year.

Fire Damage Advice

While Clarke is producing helpful advice for those in dire situations, there is also a business side to blog. In Northern Kentucky and Southwest Ohio, Clarke Contractors goal is to be the top consideration for businesses and residents looking for the type of services they offer. In short, they are happy to provide guidance and ready to respond if you should need help.

And there's no doubt Clarke is pretty good with responding to their customer's needs. They maintain an A+ rating with the Better Business Bureau of Cincinnati and was also awarded their Torch Award for Business Ethics.
