Regional Overview

Asia Pacific is estimated to notice a high CAGR growth during the projected period. The rapid urbanization coupled with an increase in mining activities is anticipated to accelerate the growth of the market. Moreover, the growth in the manufacturing sector of Asian economies along with infrastructural development supported by government initiatives is boosting the market.

Presently, the market is led by the North America region, followed by Europe. The stringent regulation in developed economies of these regions has supported the growth of the market. North America is estimated to hold over 50% of the total market share in 2021, whereas Europe accounted for nearly 16% of the market share. The US Environment Protection Agency leads the mitigation activities in the country. Organizations across the country collaborate with mitigation bankers to comply with state government regulations. Also, the region is expected to witness considerable CAGR during 2022-2030.
