CARROLLTON, TEXAS, UNITED STATES, August 9, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The product is made from all organic and natural ingredients, and offers a different way of consuming Delta 8 that gets into the body through the mouth creating more of a “body high”.

Tazo Farms, a company that produces top-quality hemp based products, has recently launched a new THC-infused beverage called Delta 8 Shot that is available in a range of potencies and flavors. The company is no stranger to the CBD industry, producing multiple other premium quality products. With this launch, it aims to provide users an enjoyable and convenient way of consuming Delta 8 without compromising on potency.

The product is available in eight organic fruit flavors with varying potency and quantity. The flavors include mango, pineapple, watermelon, tropical punch, passion fruit, blue raz, orange, and lemon. While the product is meant to be consumed directly, the drink additive variants can be mixed with other complementing beverages to give it a nice kick.

One of the major advantages of the Delta 8 THC drinks when it comes to consuming THC is that besides being tastier and more enjoyable than swallowing capsules, or dropping oil into the mouth, it is much easier to be aware of the Delta-8 THC ingested based on the serving size mentioned on the product. While drinking the beverage does not work as fast as using D8, it does not take long for the effect to be felt on the body. While it gives more of a body high, the Delta-8 content in the product is only half as strong as THC, making the high more manageable while providing similar benefits. The high can help to relieve aches, swelling, and other minor physical ailments, and promote comfort and relaxation of mind. The Delta-8 THC infused in
