INDIANOLA, WASHINGTON, UNITED STATES, August 9, 2022

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Indianola lies within the boundaries of the Port Madison Reservation. In 1916, it was a summer/weekend community only reached by steamboat. Today, it is a small, friendly rural village known as a haven for artists. The original 900-foot Indianola Dock was built when the Mosquito Fleet provided the majority of transportation on Puget Sound. Jutting hundreds of feet out into the water, the dock is considered one of the best places in the area to watch the stars or any major celestial event. No moorage, but you can pull up your kayak or canoe.

Living in Indianola offers residents a rural feel and most residents own their homes. Many young professionals live in Indianola and residents tend to lean conservative. The public schools in Indianola are above average. In the early 20th century, most transportation on Puget Sound was by steamer, and a community's dock was often its only lifeline to the outside world. Such was the case for the young community of Indianola Beach, and by 1918 a steamer was docking there every weekend.

Hyper Effects is a video production company situated in Indianola. Hyper Effects is known for helping people and organizations make a change, interpreting their beliefs, services, and products through compelling hardworking video. It is a fact that Viewers tend to remember 95% of a message when they watch it in a video compared to less than 10% when reading it in text. Be known, be bold, and be understood is the main motto behind hyper effects.

Hyper Effects offers on-demand video production services—from ideation to the final delivery—backed by their industry-leading platform and methodology that's custom tailored to each stage of the marketing funnel. Video is best known to create brand awareness, drive
