The aluminum doors and windows market consists of sales of aluminum doors and windows by entities (organizations, sole traders, partnerships) that refer to doors and windows made from aluminum using an extrusion process by forcing the pre-heated aluminum alloy through a die to create an aluminum profile. These doors and windows are used to serve as the connection between the internal portion of a house that is used to provide the lighting and ventilation of the rooms. Aluminum doors and windows have high durability and strength and are corrosion-resistant, lightweight, and malleable, compared to traditional materials such as wood.
