The jellies & gummies market consists of sales of jellies & gummies by entities (organizations, partnerships, and sole traders) that refer to a type of confectionery product made using a hydrocolloid (also known as a stabilizer) that acts as a binding element to hold sugar syrup with high moisture content. Gummies are confectionery products made of gelatin and consist of a sticky texture, transparent shades, and a sweet chewy consistency. Jellies have a more solid texture than gummies as they do not contain gelatin and use carbohydrates such as pectin, potato starch, maize starch, and tapioca.
