Increasing use of the product in the electronics industry such as in semiconductor wafers Drives Growth

NEW YORK CITY, NEW YORK, UNITED STATES, August 10, 2022

/EINPresswire.com/ -- The global fluorine Market size was robust in 2021 and is expected to register a steady revenue CAGR of 4.07% during the forecast period. Increasing use of the product in the electronics industry such as in semiconductor wafers due to its potent cleaning attributes is a key factor, which is expected to drive market revenue growth. In addition, its adoption in the solar energy sector pertaining to use in optimizing solar cells and energy stabilization is also expected to rise demand for the product.

Fluorine also denoted as F₂, is a yellow colored gas, which is a highly reactive halogen element. The product is produced through fluorospar mineral ores from the earth's crust and is basis for the fluorochemical industry. It is commercially produced by electrolysis of hydrogen fluoride which is added to the smelting mixture in metal purifications owing to its ability to lower smelting temperature, thus making the process relatively much efficient. Furthermore, the product is a major component in cryolite and aluminum manufacturing in the metallurgical sector. Additionally, other applications include, removing undesired oxides from steel sheets and from silicon cells in solar technology. Similarly, owing to its reactivity attribute, the product is widely used in the electronics sector to clean silicon semiconductor wafers.
