Study abroad USA

In Spring 2022, over half of US institutions report that all their international students attend classes in person on American campuses, compared to just eight percent in the same period of 2021. Many international students prefer in-person study on campus for the US educational experience. The luggage carrying, checking in and claiming baggage at the airport, and hauling suitcases and boxes down to the campus, could make college moving not an easy journey. American colleges and universities are also continuing efforts to make international students' study in the USA easier. Many students choose Luggage to Ship and travel light, ship the luggage and belongings ahead of college moving.

"Travel to college is one of the most memorable experiences for many students and families, yet college moving can be complicated, especially if you are a first-year student," says Mike Ulker, founder, and CEO of Luggage to Ship.
