The sports composites market consists of sales of sports composites by entities (organizations, sole traders, and partnerships) that are used to upgrade sports equipment and protect athletes from injury. Sports composites are fibers that are used to improve the strength of sports equipment, decrease its weight, and reduce its cost. Composites reduce the weight of the helmet that protects motorcyclists. They are majorly used in badminton rackets, motorcycles, bicycles, among others.

Global Sports Composites Market Trends

Technological advancements have emerged as a key trend shaping the sports composites market outlook. Major companies operating in the sports composites sector are focused on introducing new technological products to sustain their position. For instance, in 2020, Aldila, a US-based company that manufactures sports equipment, launched ALDILA ASCENT, an ultra-light golf shaft series. This model delivers an easy, high launch angle and also helps in controlling spin and face deflection for a higher ball flight with long descent roll out. It also has FlyDrive Technology, which is a full-length Visco-Elastic Isolation Layer (VEIL) that boosts the shaft's resistance to ovaling while improving overall strength and feel.
