Due to their affordability and ease of installation, carpets and rugs are typically put in new residences. Residential carpet demand for ultra-softness is propelling global revenue growth.

The demand for rugs is also being fueled by the trend of adding plush rugs for warmth to living rooms and bedrooms to create a cozy atmosphere. Innovative luxury rugs that enhance their look without compromising their durability and stain resistance are being marketed and promoted by manufacturers more and more.

Regional Overview

Due to the significant amount of commercial and residential remodeling projects underway there and the region's growing purchasing power, North America accounted for the greatest portion of global sales in 2021. The US building and housing sector's explosive growth is a key factor in the market's revenue growth. Additionally, the widespread practice of publishing original interior design-related content on social media platforms has aided in the expansion of this business in the area.
