Music Entrepreneur, Dwayne "DCat" Cornelius, Moves Into the Metaverse with DCat Music NFTs

The Famed Music Writer and Producer Announces the Launch of an Innovative Method of Music Royalties Sharing

LOS ANGELES, CA, USA, August 12, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Renowned musician, producer, and composer, Dwayne "DCat" Cornelius, is launching DCat Music Metaverse, a music publishing platform on the blockchain where artists are able to share royalties with their subscribers and creative community through Non-fungible tokens (NFTs), it was announced today.

DCAT MUSIC COMPANY, INC

According to DCat, "Owners of DCat NFTs can participate in J.A.M.M.'s royalty income, as well as have access to the music library and DCat Music's recording facilities." (Just A Minute Music, Inc. "J.A.M.M." is an online film, television, and music production library created by Dwayne Cornelius.) DCat Music Company has partnered with BPM120 West to lease space within Dream Magic Studios in Los Angeles where they have their own sound stage and recording studio.

DCat NFTs are just one phase of DCat Music Metaverse. In-house projects include the reality singing contest, All Or Nothing, inspired by the song DCat released entitled, "All or Nothing" featuring Snoop Dogg and Bust A Move Dance Party launching in 2023. These productions were a hit across Asia. Along with their Sony Distribution and J.A.M.M. library, DCat Music Metaverse hopes to enrich lives and reward its members with a learn-to-earn business model.

DCAT MUSIC METAVERSE
DCat Music Metaverse is a community-oriented platform that provides blockchain integration; using Ethereum, Solana, and their own layer where people can pay in cash or use DCat Gold

Tokens similar to casino chips or arcade-issued coins. The dcatnft.io marketplace is live now.
