Before becoming an iconic hub for live music and entertainment, the venue has had its fair share of changes and transformations. Today it is marked by a 5,000 square foot building that was built in 1949, and flanked by roughly 10,000 square feet of outdoor space populated with numerous trees that is used for hosting regular outdoor artist markets.

Speaking about the motive and inspiration in starting the company, the company's co-founder John Larue said, " Deep Ellum has had a long history of being a hub for art, entertainment, and music. In creating our company, and running this facility, we try to preserve the artistic vibe which makes Deep Ellum unique by bringing the creative community together in unique and unprecedented ways. And so far, we've been successful. The people here associate the place with live music events in Dallas which is a great honor for us."

Equipped with an advanced and highly professional in-house production team, the venue also hosts private events and parties for birthdays, weddings, multi-day corporate events, and others. With its multiple areas and layout, the venue can comfortably accommodate groups as small as 20 and as large as 2000.
