Caffeine Substitute Market Dynamics

Drivers:

- Various benefits associated with consuming caffeine substitutes

Aside from removing the caffeine, coffee substitutes are high in inulin, a prebiotic fibre that has been shown to improve digestive health and promote weight loss. They also have an adequate amount of vitamin B6 and manganese, two nutrients that are essential for brain health. These advantages directly translate into increased demand for coffee substitutes, directly boosting market growth.

- Shift in the lifestyle as well as growing demand from the personal care industry

Some of the factors expected to fuel global market growth during the forecast period include an increasing working population, rising demand for ready-to-use products, and expanding retail markets. The increasing use of caffeine substitutes as a natural ingredient in the cosmetics industry is expected to drive growth in the global caffeine substitute market. Furthermore, rising disposable income levels, rising food and beverage expenditure, and rising consumer awareness of healthy lifestyles are some of the other factors expected to drive caffeine substitute market growth.

Opportunity

Growing promotional activities on social media platforms and other platforms, such as the internet, TV, and newspapers is helping to spread information about the benefits of caffeine substitute's product. Furthermore, coffee substitutes are packaged in pouches, cans, and aseptic cartons, which preserve their flavour for a longer period and help keep moisture levels under control, preventing mould growth.

Restraints

The high manufacturing costs associated with caffeine substitute in comparison to conventional coffee produced using synthetic chemicals will impede the growth of the caffeine substitute market during the forecast period. Furthermore, the availability of product substitutes will act as a restraint on the growth of the caffeine substitute market during the forecast period.
