Market Trends

The rising per capita consumption of fish in India has fuelled the demand over the last few years. Consumption of fish is predicted to rise over the projected period, owing to rising disposable incomes and changing eating patterns. The demand is also helped by the growth of the organised food retail industry, which will make processed fish, especially canned and frozen fish products, more accessible to customers. In India, the health and fitness food industry is booming, and because of the rising understanding of its health benefits, the demand for fish, a nutritious food with high levels of digestible protein, cholesterol-lowering capacity, and PUFA, is expected to rise rapidly.
