

Careficient Becomes the First EMR Solution Provider to Receive ACHC Accreditation

ACHC Awards Product Certification for Quality, Performance and Focus on Patient Care

JENSEN BEACH, FLORIDA, UNITED STATES, August 22, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Careficient Inc. today announced their recent product certification by the Accreditation Commission for Health Care (ACHC). Careficient is the first electronic medical record (EMR) solution provider to receive product certification in each of the seven areas for home health, hospice, and home care. The new certification provides validation that Careficient products meet the requirements set by the ACHC for quality, performance and focus on patient care.

A product can be certified in seven areas, each aligning with a group of ACHC standards that an organization must adhere to in order to achieve accreditation. These areas include evaluating vendor compliance for administration, operations, fiscal management, human resources, provision of care, and record management, quality, and risk management.

"At Careficient, we prioritize quality and compliance," said Kristie Meers, vice president of clinical & regulatory at Careficient. "We develop EMR solutions that make agency operations more efficient, and software that safeguards compliance to mitigate potential risk to our clients. Attaining ACHC's official EMR certification provides the added assurance that Careficient meets the high standards set for our industry and strives to deliver exceptional quality for regulatory compliance requirements."

"We are truly honored to be the first EMR provider to earn the ACHC product certification for home health, hospice, and home care," said Brad Caldwell, chief operating officer of Careficient. "Our team was committed to success during months of intense scrutiny and a rigorous surveyor audit that resulted in 100% satisfaction in meeting the high-quality standards set by ACHC."

Careficient is the first EMR to be ACHC certified for home health, hospice and home care.
