Rare Nest Gallery Chicago Presents Hauptschein / Segedin Self Portraits September 10th

Both artists have engaged in deep explorations of self-representation that combine introspection and extraversion.

*Keith Bringe, Rare Nest
Gallery Director*

Both artists face challenges in age, vision, ableness, and a fear of invisibility. What can we learn from their perspectives? Hauptschein (71) and Segedin (95) overcome substantial challenges with their vision. Segedin was diagnosed with dry macular degeneration over a decade ago. Hauptschein, 72, developed an undiagnosed eye ailment, which makes it difficult for him do eye-straining work. Courageous artists accommodating age with disability, adaptation, and the enduring, triumphant impulse to create are explored in this exhibition. The exhibition will be accompanied by additional complementary events and visits to the artists' studios.

David Hauptschein (1951, Philadelphia) is a Chicago-based artist, playwright, and screenwriter. He has also published two collections of his plays, An Alchemy of Flesh and Other Plays (2021) and When the Walls Have Ears and Other Plays (2020). Most recently, in 2020, Hauptschein wrote the screenplay for Country of Hotels, a feature length film directed by Julio Maria Martino.
