Each morning, the lighthouse keeper awakes to watch seals play, fish swim, and seagulls fly. In his small, seaside town, the marine life lives in perfect harmony. One night while the lighthouse keeper sleeps, trouble lurks in the bay. The lighthouse keeper must work quickly to save the sea animals and find some help along the way.

Parents will love this beautifully illustrated book, which teaches children the importance of protecting the ocean and marine life, as well as caring for the environment.

"My parents were big advocates for reading to me and my sisters, and I have very fond memories of reading books or having them read to me at a very young age. I love the impact that a book can have on you and it has always been my dream to write one myself," said Biron. "Recently, I found myself surrounded by a flood of creative books and illustrations as I have spent the past two years working at an elementary school and I was inspired to follow my dreams and take action by writing this book. It is dedicated to my students for giving me so much."

Biron, who is only 20 years old wrote and illustrated The Lighthouse Keeper Saves the Bay. As a
