The documents noted above... are evidence of a corporate conspiracy to prevent asbestos workers from learning that their exposure to asbestos could kill them.”

Trustee of the Manville Trust, 1988

Typically, asbestos exposure will have occurred sometime between the 1950s and the 1980s. Some of the most prevalent professions that encountered large quantities of asbestos include power plant workers, maritime workers, industrial workers, plumbers, pipefitters, electricians, mechanics, machinists, miners, railroad workers and construction workers, to name a few. Since the latency period for mesothelioma patients is approximately 40 years, most people diagnosed with mesothelioma or asbestos-related lung cancer in 2022 were exposed decades ago.

Fortunately, Mississippi does not contain any naturally occurring asbestos deposits. However, Mississippi residents should be wary of the heightened risks of asbestos exposure in the oil & gas, power plant and shipbuilding industries, to name a few. Risky occupations for asbestos exposure include welders, electricians, gas fitters, dock workers, demolition workers, chemical workers, carpenters and boiler operators.

The Steinberg Law Group is affiliated with doctors around the country.
