family business from the ground up,” said Jordan Evans, CEO of Language Network. “Language Network was founded by my mom, an immigrant from Mexico, who began as a single Spanish interpreter looking to help her community communicate cross-culturally. My sister and I continue the work our family started, and we have expanded our business into a family of language companies including Language Exchange, Academy of Languages, and International Contact.”

As diversity continues to flourish in the United States, and companies continue to expand business globally, it has become more important than ever for organizations to communicate effectively cross-culturally with dependable and accurate language solutions.
