The epoxy segment is expected to account for a large revenue share over the forecast period. This is attributed to its wide availability, environmental friendliness, and being economical compared to other coating solutions. Epoxy concrete floor coatings are a great option for anyone looking for beautiful and long-lasting flooring. To form a chemical bond with concrete, hardeners and polymer resins are mixed together with many different color and decorative options available. A surface that is more robust than floor paint and can endure heavy traffic is one of the advantages of employing an epoxy coating. Additionally, it creates a floor that is easy to maintain, stain-resistant, and versatile enough to be utilized for both residential and commercial purposes. Moreover, it creates vibrant, distinctive visuals that can be adjusted in a variety of ways and it requires little setup time and downtime.

The indoor segment is expected to account for a large revenue share in the global market over the forecast period owing to demand for housing infrastructure, which is increasing in proportion to population that is accelerating need for new residential construction projects. Finishing options for concrete include polishing, coloring, staining, and putting decorative coatings, which makes it possible to complete a concrete basement floor or to expose concrete floor slabs that had been carpeted or tiled over. In the kitchen, cellar, garage, or warehouse, individuals require a floor that can endure a range of stresses. Concrete coatings are highly resilient and do not chip or break like other floor tiles and is the most cost-effective option for any commercial establishment. A beautiful, well-constructed concrete floor can last between 50 and 100 years. If the flooring is maintained by a concrete coating, it can last full life of the house.
