Moving is one of the most stressful events in life.”

said Michael Taylor, Founder

Moving can be stressful, especially when there are unexpected issues or delays. While many rely on friends and family to assist them, others prefer to do everything themselves. Unfortunately, this often leads to misinformation and inaccurate information about moving services.

Better Moving Bureau’s blog will provide consumers with the most accurate information possible, including tips on preparing for a move, what to expect during the process, and how to avoid scams.

In addition, the blog will include helpful advice from professional movers and real estate agents.

“Moving is one of the most stressful events in life,” said Michael Taylor, founder and CEO of Better Moving Bureau. “Our blog will help consumers get accurate information about moving services to make informed decisions. We want to empower consumers to make smart choices about moving.”

In addition to the blog, Better Moving Bureau will release new services to help consumers find reliable moving companies and receive quotes. The services will be available soon.
