Market Growth

With the shift in the type of work and working hours, people today have adapted to a very unhealthy lifestyle which is the main cause of all health problems. Back pain, headache, insomnia, body aches, alcoholism, obesity, and menstrual problems among women are major problems caused by disturbed living habits. In addition, the rising prevalence of chronic diseases, rise in sedentary lifestyle, obesity, and alcoholism drive the growth of the global acupuncture needles market. Acupuncture has shown positive and lasting effects in treating all these problems when combined with other forms of exercise such as yoga, running, walking, and meditation. This has escalated the acupuncture needles market by a large amount, adding to the monetary gains.

Market Segmentation Overview

Acupuncture is part of traditional Chinese medical care. It is an alternative to medicine in which needles are inserted into specific pressure points in the body to stimulate nerves. It is mainly used to treat body aches, headaches, migraines, joint diseases, postoperative pain, nausea, menstrual cramps, insomnia, speech disorders, and paralysis. It is also used to treat emotional disorders (anxiety and depression), digestive disorders (nausea, vomiting, and irritable bowel syndrome), respiratory conditions (asthma and sinusitis), and is beneficial in alcoholism, chemotherapy, and gynecological disorders (infertility). The key driving factors for the global acupuncture needles market growth are the rising prevalence of chronic diseases, rise in sedentary lifestyle, obesity, and alcoholism. These illnesses have led to complications such as systemic pain, sleep disturbances, and emotional disturbances. In addition, the lack of severe side effects compared to drugs and unpleasant medical procedures are driving the demand for acupuncture. Although, adverse effects such as bleeding, infection & pain from needles, and lack of coverage for acupuncture treatments are hindering the market growth. In addition, raising awareness about acupuncture treatment is expected to bring new opportunities to the acupuncture needles market.
