

The Exodus Road Participates in Florida SKULL Games to Develop Leads on Human Trafficking Cases in the United States

The collaborative efforts resulted in 25 leads passed to U.S. law enforcement partners on potential trafficking victims, persons of interest and businesses.

COLORADO SPRINGS, CO, UNITED STATES, August 31, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- On August 5-8, ATP and The Exodus Road share the same vision of a world where women and children are free and we are looking for more opportunities to share resources and Free the Oppressed.”

Jeff Tiegs, COO of All Things Possible Ministries

The Exodus Road’s cyber analytics team attended the Skull Games in Tampa, Fla., hosted by All Things Possible (ATP) and Echo Analytics Group, to gather digital intelligence on human trafficking crime in the U.S. Individuals from around the country gathered in Tampa to investigate close to 100 leads to help identify human trafficking victims, persons of interest, and businesses of interest.

The teams compiled their investigative work into lead reports to assist law enforcement organizations in their fight against human trafficking. These collaborative efforts resulted in numerous lead reports that have been submitted to U.S. law-enforcement partners, including 25 potential victim identifications, multiple persons of interest, and various businesses.

While at the Skull Games, The Exodus Road’s cyber analytics team was able to gain more knowledge and insights into best practices for identifying victims of trafficking online and translating those findings into actionable reports for law enforcement. As the team heads back to Colorado Springs, they look forward to growing partnerships with local law enforcement and organizations to help combat human trafficking right here in Colorado, Laura Parker, The Exodus Road’s CEO and co-founder, said.

For the last 10 years, The Exodus Road has helped police combat human trafficking crime globally through human intelligence gathering and investigative efforts. In the last two years, the nonprofit added a focus of gathering open source, digital intelligence to find victims and build cases.

This work has primarily been utilized with international teams; however, in 2022, The Exodus Road launched a new cyber analytics branch focusing on human trafficking crime here in the United States. With the help of volunteer analysts and multiple software systems, The Exodus Road is taking the fight for freedom online.

“Open source intelligence is becoming increasingly vital to the work we do around the world to ensure that no humans are bought, sold, or exploited,” said Andrew Hoskins, The Exodus Road’s Vice President of International Programs. “COVID-19 accelerated an already growing online exploitation industry. The online aspect of investigating crime and searching for victims poses new challenges but also new opportunities to partner with law enforcement to disrupt human trafficking crime.”

“The analysts from The Exodus Road were a terrific addition to our latest Skull Game,” Jeff Tiegs, the COO of All Things Possible Ministries, said. “They are incredibly talented and jumped right in. We want them to be a part of every Skull Game from here on out. ATP and The Exodus Road share the same vision of a world where women and children are free and we are looking for more opportunities to share resources and Free the Oppressed.”
