“I am so excited about this partnership with Women And Drones. I believe together we can create many new educational and networking opportunities for women in the photography/video industry and continue our shared mission to empower women” stated Beth Mancuso, founder of Women's Photography Circle. ”

Drones provide endless new opportunities to capture high-quality photos and video from angles that would have previously been impossible. The demand for those images is growing with more photographers buying a drone and getting their FAA certification and adding aerial photography to their list of services.

“I share Beth's excitement about our partnership” says Sharon Rossmark, CEO of Women and Drones. “Our two companies will offer unique learning opportunities for women in the visual arts arena. The plan is to uplift more women owned businesses."
