The filter market consists of sales of filters by entities (organizations, sole traders, and partnerships) that refer to a porous substance or material, such as a paper or sand, through which a liquid or gas is passed to remove floating particles. Filters are used to remove impurities from air, gas, and liquid. Filters are used in various industries such as automotive, consumer goods, manufacturing, and others.

Global Filters Market Trends

Nanotechnology is one of the key filters industry trends gaining popularity. Nanotechnology in filters refers to the use of nanomaterials, and nanoparticles to improve the performance of filters. One such filter system based on nanotechnology is a nanotech-based water purification system that is thought to be modular, highly efficient, and cost-effective compared to traditional water filtration procedures. These systems are made up of carbonaceous nanomaterials, metal oxide nanoparticles, zeolites, and other nanomaterials that are integrated into a polymeric matrix to improve the performance of traditional polymeric membranes. For instance, in February 2020, Parker Hannifin Corporation, a US-based motion and control technology
